SUMMARY

Facebook is committed to helping people and organizations protect their Intelligent Property rights and do not allow people to post content that violates someone else’s IP rights.

The data contains how many reports of IP violations is received.

The data that I used shows that from 2017 to 2020, how many potential counterfeit or copyright-related violations the Facebook team received. Under Terms of Service and Facebook Community Standards, rights holders can submit IP reports identifying content on Facebook and Instagram that they believe violates their rights. If a report is complete and valid, Facebook will act promptly to remove the reported content.

The data shows that, the following reported content:

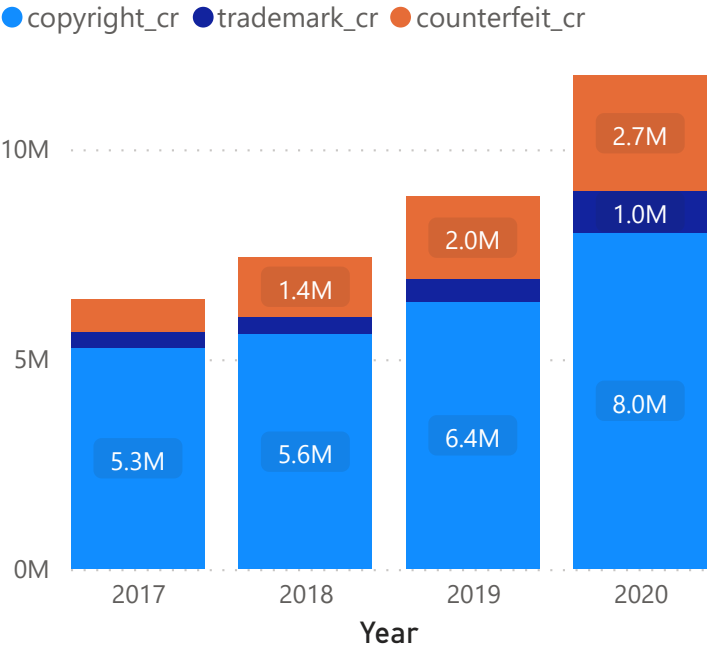

- Copyrights - 4.33M
- Trademarks – 1M
- Counterfeit – 535K,

64 % - Facebook
36 % - Instagram

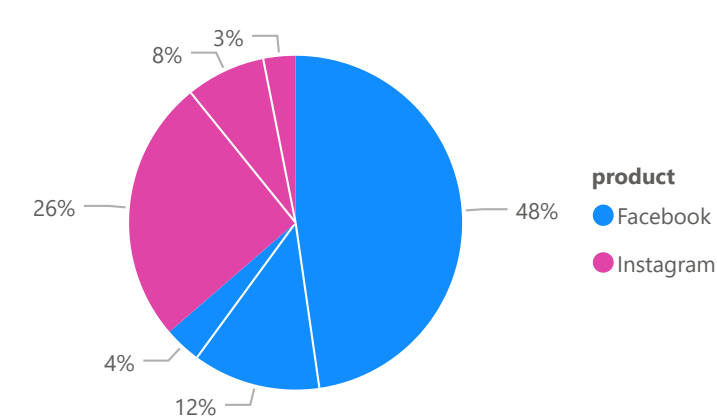

On the graph 'Facebook and Instagram copyright reported', we can see that after pandemic starts the number of reports increased dramatically almost doubled. It means, after lock down people started spending more time in social media. Based on the predictions for 2021, the number of reports will increase by 16% with the following 95% confidence interval 136K and 207K.
